Budget debate expected

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A busy schedule faces members of the General Assembly when they return to the Capitol today with the first floor debate of next year's budget measures expected in the House.

The Senate will continue its ponderous scrutiny of a lengthy criminal code revision and could possibly take up consideration of a revised version of the House-approved death penalty bill.

Late last week, the House Appropriations Committee sent to the floor the first four of the nine bills making up the state's $2 billion budget for the year beginning in July, those four measures, covering the public debt, schools, the Revenue Department and the executive branch, total well over half of that budget.

With action by the committee running behind the normal schedule, the House and Senate will have only seven weeks now to consider the bills and work out their differences on funding before the June 8 deadline for passage of the measures.

House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, after reiterating the constitutional prohibition against deficit spending and calling for the committee to keep spending within the upcoming year's revenue projections, said he will support the committee's recommendations completely.

Consideration of the revised criminal code in the Senate could come to an end this week after more than a month. Sen. Ike Skelton, D-Lexington, who is handling the measure, has gotten to the point in the 200-page bill where debate should begin moving rapidly.

Cape man gets 6 years

BLOOMFIELD — A young Cape Girardeau man was sentenced to six years in custody of the Missouri Department of Corrections Wednesday on a charge in March which stemmed from the sale of amphetimes to an undercover agent on March 14, 1975. He supposedly received $125 for the sale of the drugs. The case was heard on a change of venue from Cape Girardeau County.

Burnett, Wehmeyer get top Jaycee awards

CHAFFEE - Jack Burnett was presented the distinguished service award and Dr. Pete Wehmeyer was awarded the special appreciation award by the Chaffee Jaycees Saturday night at the annual Jaycee Awards and installation banquet in the Elks Lodge.

Master of ceremonies DeWayne Bryant explained that the two awards go to deserving persons in the community whether they are members of the Jaycees or not. Neither Burnett nor Dr. Wehmeyer are members.

Mrs. Emily Green presented a reading of an original poem she had written for each of them and gave them the original, hand-written copy of the work.

Outstanding Jaycee of the Year honors were awarded to Larry Glueck, who was also installed as president for the 1975-76 year, succeeding Bryant, who received a past president award.

Glueck said he hopes the Jaycees will work more closely with other organizations in the community during the coming year.

Spark plug awards were presented to 12 persons who have been active in the local organization for two or more years. The Sparkplug of the Year award was presented to Richard Hodge.

Spoke Awards were presented to three persons who have been active in the organization for one year. The Spoke of the Year award was presented to Rick Cobb.

In addition, certificates were presented to new members and to Jaycees who spoke off the cuff during the year on a number of subjects. Also, certificates of appreciation were presented to 28 organizations and individuals including The Daily Standard.

Other officers installed included: Richard Hodge, internal vice president, who succeeded Dick Enderle; Stan Hahn, external vice president, succeeding Hodge; Delbert Hormon, secretary, replacing Delmer Stidham, who was installed as treasurer, the position formerly held by Hormon.

New directors installed were David White, Mike Griffin, Rick Cobb and Mike Eichhorn, who was re-elected. Outgoing directors were Rodney Miller, Hahn and Glueck.

The guest speaker was State Rep. Marvin Proffer of Jackson, who said "Politics is not nasty or dirty. Politics is a part of our way of life, but we have to be involved all the way down the line and be involved on a local level."

When people fail to get involved, he said it lets the minority rule and the democratic process fails. "We've all failed in some way probably to get involved," he said.

"The only way to solve our problems is involvement on the local levels. "That's where it works, that's where it all begins," he said.

Thieu resigns in peace bid

SAIGON (AP) — A tearful President Nguyen Van Thieu resigned tonight in an eleventh-hour bid for a settlement with Communist-led forces who have driven almost to the gates of Saigon. He bitterly accused the United States of moves that he claimed "led the South Vietnamese people to death."

The Viet Cong had demanded Thieu's ouster as a first step toward talks. But some U.S. experts say that fighting in South Vietnam so favors the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, who have taken three-quarters of the country, it is doubtful they would be willing to negotiate even with Thieu gone.

In Paris, the Viet Cong delegation called for a total U.S. withdrawal from South Vietnam and the establishment of a national concord regime in Saigon. The French government urgently called for talks between South Vietnam and the Viet Cong to set up such a regime to settle the political future of the embattled country.

At Clark Air Base in the Philippines, meanwhile, about 1,000 Americans and Vietnamese arrived in the largest such airlift yet from South Vietnam. U.S. officials reportedly bypassed South Vietnamese immigration officials to put many of the Vietnamese aboard. Other Vietnamese evacuees arrived in Guam.

Although the Viet Cong had repeatedly demand Thieu's ouster, there was no indication it would bring an immediate halt to the fighting that has swept closer and closer to Saigon.

Thieu said South Vietnam could not win militarily and blamed the United States for its failure, saying Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was unable to perceive that the 1973 Paris agreement "led the South Vietnamese people to death."

Thieu himself declared, "There will be more challenges and fierce fighting in the near future."

Thieu, 52, named Vice President Tran Van Huong, 71, to succeed him and told the nation in a 90-minute television address that the new government "shall take its briefcase to the negotiating table." But there was speculation that Huong, who is in poor health and virtually blind, would resign along with the entire Cabinet and that 61-year-old Tran Van Lam, the president of the Senate, would become president.

Huong, in a brief address that followed Thieu's 90-minute speech, called on the South Vietnamese people to unite "because we will die if we do otherwise. If we do not help ourselves, then our hope for the assistance of others is hopeless."

Thieu stepped down as 10 Communist-led divisions threatened Saigon. Radio contact was lost with government forces under heavy attack at Xuan Loc, the gateway to the capital 40 miles east of Saigon, and still another province on the coast 35 miles farther east apparently was about to fall.

In his televised address, Thieu said, "I told President Nixon and the U.S. Congress that I did not demand an indefinite assistance but only assistance for five years so we can develop our economy."

"I said I was like a newly recovered patient and if I am given enough medicines soon, I will be strong enough. But later the internal affairs of the U.S. prevented the Republic of Vietnam from getting sufficient assistance.

Money, keys, skates stolen

Thieves took $341 from a home, keys from a purse, skates from a skating rink and an air breather from an auto engine, police said today.

Someone took $341 from a room at the M. D. Ducas and Martha Thompson home, 200 Dona, about 3 a.m. Sunday, police said.

The thief may have entered through an unlocked door.

Burglars entered the Skating Rink at 840 Anderson St., between 4 p.m. Wednesday and 11:30 a.m. Friday, taking 13 pairs of skates valued at $520, $15 from a cash drawer and an undetermined amount of money from a vending machine.

Helen Calhoun of Bell City told police that someone took her keys and credit card from her purse, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Friday at the Senior High School.

Mrs. Calhoun said the purse was found in one of the boys' restrooms.

Steve Wapata, 600 Pine St., told police someone took an air breather from the engine of his automobile sometime April 8 or 9. The theft occurred while the car was parked at his home.

Ag officials tour area to view flood damage

State Agricultural officials and Nelson B. Tinnin of Hornersville toured Southeast Missouri today to evaluate cropland damages caused by early spring flooding.

Among the group are James B. Boillot, director of Missouri Department of Agriculture; Don Pemberton of Cape Girardeau, district director of the Agriculture Stabilization Conservation Service; and Peter C. Myers of Sikeston, a member of the Governor's Council on Agriculture.

The party reviewed damages caused by the swollen waters of the Mississippi, St. Francis and Castor rivers. The Mississippi River reached the highest flood stage since 1937 on April 3 at Cairo, Ill., cresting at 56.47 feet. The high waters have produced seep water, which now stands over many acres of low lying cropland, causing a delay in spring planting.

Boillot says the group's mission is to "evaluate the damage caused by the flood-waters and to work with county courts in the area to determine what action is necessary."

Upon completion of the trip, Boillot will brief Gov. Christopher S. Bond on the extent of the damages and offer suggestions for relief of the flooded areas.

2 cars stolen over weekend

Two cars were reported stolen over the weekend, according to police.

A car owned by Evon Gonzolas, of Morehouse, was reported stolen between 9 p.m. Saturday and 5 a.m. Sunday from beside the City Bar, 1100 W. Malone Ave.

A car owned by James Cowger, Route Two, was taken from the parking lot of Shady Acres Church of Christ about 8:50 a.m. Sunday.

Police said a juvenile was given a ride to church and stayed in the car to listen to the radio until Sunday school started. When the Cowgers came out to check on him, the car was gone. The keys had been left in the ignition.

Seven persons were injured in six area traffic accidents over the weekend, the highway patrtol reported today. Three of the victims received serious injuries, and all of the accidents were single-vehicle mishaps.

Robert Gene Cates, 19, of Poplar Bluff, the driver of a car traveling west on Highway 49 at 9:50 p.m. Sunday, and a passenger, Jeanette June Beason, 17, of Williamsville, were seriously injured when Cates lost control of the car on a curve. The vehicle ran off the road and struck a tree approximately seven miles east of Williamsville.

Both were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Versa Lee Johnson, 23, of Chicago was seriously injured at 9:40 a.m. Sunay one mile east of Sikeston on Interstate 57 when she was thrown from a car driven by her brother, Charles E. Bullock, 25, of Oceanside, Calif.

The patrol said the accident occurred as Bullock was driving west at an excessive rate of speed and lost control of the car, which ran off the road and overturned three times.

In another accident at 3:35 p.m. Sunday on Highway 84 six miles west of Hayti, a pedestrian, Orville Earl Sawyers, 10, of Deering, received minor injuries when he ran in front of an eastbound car driven by Edward R. Cunningham, 33, of Kennett.

The boy was treated at Pemiscot County Memorial Hosptil in Hayti.

The boy was treated at Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti.

Three traffic accidents occurred on Saturday. The first was on Route Z a half mile east of Vanduser.

Mike Bivins, 17, of Vanduser received minor injuries at 1 a.m. Saturday half a mile east of Vanduser on Route Z when he lost control of his eastbound pickup truck while rounding a curve at a high rate of speed and the truck ran off the road and struck a utility pole before coming to rest in a field.

Bivins was treated and released at Chaffee General Hospital.

Paskell C. Bolin, 52, of East Prairie received minor injuries at 9:30 a.m. Saturday on an unmarked blacktop road three miles north of New Madrid when his southbound pickup truck struck a pothole, causing it to run off the road and overturn in a field.

Bolin was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

Richard A. Lyle, 22, of Florissant received minor injuries at 9:30 p.m. Saturday one and a half miles east of Greenville on Route D when his westbound car crossed the center line and ran off the road on the sough side, became airborne and came to rest on the side of the road.

Items sold on first day

William Dock of Sikeston Route Two is now among the many other persons who have discovered how quickly results are achieved through use of the classified advertising section of The Daily Standard.

Dock advertised to sell two mobile home trailer axles with wheels and tires and sold the items the first day the ad appeared in the paper.

For quick results, use the classified advertising section of The Daily Standard. Telephone 471-4141 daily from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday until noon, or visit The Daily Standard office at 205 S. New Madrid St.

Energy shortage could choke economic recovery, Smith says

There is a lack of leadership in Washington over which actions should be taken to solve the crucial energy problems facing the nation, Frank Smith, president of Arkansas Missouri Power Co., said Saturday.

Smith said the only decision made had been to build the Alaska Pipeline, and that came only after years of fighting. There are no decisions on strip mining or on off-shore drilling.

He warned that if something is not done soon, the country could become even more dependent on foreign energy supplies.

He cited a planning study made by Westinghouse Co., which showed economic recovery from the recession may be chocked off because of a lack of energy.

The country will need either tremendous amounts of imported oil or new sources of energy.

Those new sources, he said, will revolve around coal and nuclear fuel.

While nuclear plans could completely eliminate the need for oil imports, he said, new plant construction is being delayed by environmentalist groups.

The delays will add to the cost of construction the new plants and will be passed on the consumer, he said.

"No one proposes ruining of the environment," he said, "but we must recognize there are risks to be taken and we must recognize there are risks in importing oil.

Seven persons were injured in six area traffic accidents over the weekend, the highway patrtol reported today. Three of the victims received serious injuries, and all of the accidents were single-vehicle mishaps.

Robert Gene Cates, 19, of Poplar Bluff, the driver of a car traveling west on Highway 49 at 9:50 p.m. Sunday, and a passenger, Jeanette June Beason, 17, of Williamsville, were seriously injured when Cates lost control of the car on a curve. The vehicle ran off the road and struck a tree approximately seven miles east of Williamsville.

Both were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Versa Lee Johnson, 23, of Chicago was seriously injured at 9:40 a.m. Sunay one mile east of Sikeston on Interstate 57 when she was thrown from a car driven by her brother, Charles E. Bullock, 25, of Oceanside, Calif.

The patrol said the accident occurred as Bullock was driving west at an excessive rate of speed and lost control of the car, which ran off the road and overturned three times.

In another accident at 3:35 p.m. Sunday on Highway 84 six miles west of Hayti, a pedestrian, Orville Earl Sawyers, 10, of Deering, received minor injuries when he ran in front of an eastbound car driven by Edward R. Cunningham, 33, of Kennett.

The boy was treated at Pemiscot County Memorial Hosptil in Hayti.

Three traffic accidents occurred on Saturday. The first was on Route Z a half mile east of Vanduser.

Mike Bivins, 17, of Vanduser received minor injuries at 1 a.m. Saturday half a mile east of Vanduser on Route Z when he lost control of his eastbound pickup truck while rounding a curve at a high rate of speed and the truck ran off the road and struck a utility pole before coming to rest in a field.

Bivins was treated and released at Chaffee General Hospital.

Paskell C. Bolin, 52, of East Prairie received minor injuries at 9:30 a.m. Saturday on an unmarked blacktop road three miles north of New Madrid when his southbound pickup truck struck a pothole, causing it to run off the road and overturn in a field.

Richard A. Lyle, 22, of Florissant received minor injuries at 9:30 p.m. Saturday one and a half miles east of Greenville on Route D when his westbound car crossed the center line and ran off the road on the sough side, became airborne and came to rest on the side of the road.

Energy shortage could choke economic recovery, Smith says

There is a lack of leadership in Washington over which actions should be taken to solve the crucial energy problems facing the nation, Frank Smith, president of Arkansas Missouri Power Co., said Saturday.

Smith said the only decision made had been to build the Alaska Pipeline, and that came only after years of fighting. There are no decisions on strip mining or on off-shore drilling.

He warned that if something is not done soon, the country could become even more dependent on foreign energy supplies.

He cited a planning study made by Westinghouse Co., which showed economic recovery from the recession may be chocked off because of a lack of energy.

The country will need either tremendous amounts of imported oil or new sources of energy.

Those new sources, he said, will revolve around coal and nuclear fuel.

While nuclear plans could completely eliminate the need for oil imports, he said, new plant construction is being delayed by environmentalist groups.

The delays will add to the cost of construction the new plants and will be passed on the consumer, he said.

"No one proposes ruining of the environment," he said, "but we must recognize there are risks to be taken and we must recognize there are risks in importing oil.

If President Ford is looking for a way to cut federal spending, and he should be, he might want to review a new book by United Press International reporter Donald Lambro. Lambro, who covers the nation's capital for the press service, has written an manuscript on how to do away with some $25 billion in federal spending. Lambro examines 50 government programs and declares they should go. Since the proponents of the metric system are running into opposition to the change from plain, ordinary Americans, our attention has been called to the latest government innovation which is being "tested" in various parts of the country.

The government is now offering a new system of signs without words, just pictures. The purpose of this move, we understand, is to make it easier for foreigners to travel around over here.

These are not only traffic safety signs, but all kinds of signs -- lost and found, baggage lockers, shops, smoking and no smoking, telephone, bus and so on.

Everything is done in silhouette. Car rental, for example, is indicated by the front end of a car with a car key above it. A coffee shop is a picture of a coffee cup. Nothing else. No words.

These tests, supposedly, will go on for several years. Then some bureaucrat in the government will recom mend them for here and abroad.

And so, as wit the metric system, we plan still another step toward universal sameness in the old world.

Of all the nations in the Western world, only Germany is having any form of success in battling inflation. President Ford, as well as the new Congress, should examine the economic policies which have enabled this one European country to avoid the ravages of inflation while its neighbors teeter on the brink of bankruptcy.

What the German government has done to fight inflation is to slash federal spending. The move was unpopular at first, especially among those Cabinet ministers who saw their pet projects chopped from the German budget.But in just a few months, fiscal soundness paid off. While the rest of the West suffers from double-digit inflation, in Germany, despite the mammoth increases in oil prices, the rate of inflation is projected to be only 7 per cent this year.

Once the German government proved by its actions that it was serious about fighting inflation, the country's citizens responded accordingly. They sharply increased savings and cut consumer borrowing by an amazing 92 per cent.

We believe most Americans would join the fight on inflation if our federal government offered leadership by positive example instead of political double-talk.

DETERMINATION NEEDED

The real facts of the energy shortage are startlingly simple. Unless new sources of energy are developed in the next few years, the United States faces a genuine energy crisis in which the wheels of industry could stop and the lights in our homes go out.

While the situation is serious in the extreme, it is far from hopeless. This nation has a supply of coal estimated to be adequate for several hundred years. It is hypothesized that 55 percent of the discoverable oil and 66 percent of this country's gas are still waiting to be found. Huge deposits of oil shales and tar sands have not even been tapped. If the nation's electric companies are permitted to build the facilities they need -- particularly nuclear generating stations -- we can take care of our requirements for electricity, that most versatile form of energy. In short, the U.S. has just about everything it needs to solve this problem except the determination to do what is necessary.

At this point in time, more than anything else, we need a national desire to pull ourselves up by our own bootstraps and make the necessary decisions to implant programs which will encourage development of our domestic energy resources. We, as a nation, must be prepared to accept the fact that prices of gasoline and electric power will have to rise if investment funds are to be forthcoming as needed to finance the massive research development and construction programs required. Alaska's North Slope contains an estimated 10 billion barrels of oil, but we must halt delay in construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline before this source of petroleum can be made available. Drilling on the Outer Continental Shelf is an absolute must and could increase annual domestic petroleum supplies by an estimated 1.5 billion barrels. In addition, ways must be found to use our vast coal supplies in an environmentally-acceptable manner.

The time for wishful thinking that the energy crisis will go away, or that it can be corrected by importing greater quantities of petroleum from other nations is long past. The U.S. will be assured of having adequate energy supplies only when it uses its own initiative to develop its own resources.

XXX

CONSERVATION IS ENERGY MONEY-SAVER

At the recent National Governors' Conference in Washington, 28 state chief executives called for a voluntary conservation program "of massive proportions" for a trial period of four to six months before the government attempts to curb oil consumption by harsher means.

Their voices join a growing chorus. Shortly before the governors convened, the National Research Council, a branch of the National Academy of Sciences, made the alarming report that the nation's actual reserves of recoverable oil and gas may be less than half that estimated by government energy analysts and claimed that the goal of energy self-sufficiency by the 1980s is "essentially impossible."

Among other steps, the council recommended a "conservation ethic" which, in the words of Dr. Brian J. Skinner, chairman of the panel that produced the study, should become "kind of a national religion."

But just how much hope does conservation promise?

In a letter to President Ford in January, David Rickelton, president of the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers, outlined a number of proposals he said could save 7.5 to 10 per cent of the total energy used in the U.S. — the equivalent of 3 to 4 million barrels of oil a day.

While we are learning how to harness such exotic forms of energy as sunlight and the heat inside the earth, savings can be made now by the use of existing technology applied to existing structures, said Rickelton, without fueling inflation as the $3 tax on oil would do or creating an enormous bureaucracy as rationing would do.

As an example of what a single company can accomplish, for the 12-month period ending Oct. 31, 1974, General Mills reduced its in-house energy consumption by 9.8 per cent, for a savings of $1.5 million in fuel costs.

Continental Oil Company has launched an internal conservation program aimed at a 15 per cent reduction in its energy consumption, ranging from turning off unnecessary lights to making sure that boilers and furnaces are programmed for the most efficient operation.

According to Ken Gerhart, director of the program, the 15 per cent reduction would add up to an annual savings of $28 million for the company, but more important, would be the equivalent of finding a new oil field producing over 8,000 barrels a day.

"A substantial degree of energy conservation is an attainable goal for the nation," says Dr. John G. Myers, author of an analysis by the Conference Board.

He notes that the industrial sector of the economy, mainly manufacturing, consumes about 40 per cent of all the energy used in the U.S. Yet while manufacturing output rose 4.3 per cent a year between 1947 and 1971, energy use expanded only 2.7 per cent — this during a period when energy was becoming cheaper in relation to other goods.

The continuing introduction of energy-saving equipment is likely to result in sizable cutbacks in the use of energy over the next decade, he predicts.

But will Americans really get "conservation religion"?

Consider the city of Danville, Va. Faced with a shut-down of its industries this winter because of a 55.5 per cent cutback in natural gas deliveries, the community voluntarily reduced the use of gas for heating by businesses and residences to keep the factories going.

Nationally, electricity output, which jumped 7.1 per cent a year from 1960 to 1973, did not rise last year. Gasoline sales during last summer's peak driving months were 1 per cent below 1973, after climbing 4.6 per cent a year from 1950.

We can cut down on energy use more cheaply than we can expand domestic supplies, points out Dr. Myers, and we would gain the added benefits of less ecological damage while having to spend less on environmental protection.

GOVERNMENT, INDUSTRY SPLIT COST OF TESTING NEW OIL RECOVERY PLAN

Fireflooding — a way of heating deposits of heavy crude oil to thin the oil so it can be pumped to the surface — will be demonstrated under a $6,791,800 cost-sharing agreement with the Husky Oil Company, the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines announced recently.

The Cody, Wyo., firm has put up $4,791,800, and the government, $2 million, for a 51-month demonstration of the fireflood as a technique for stimulating reservoirs that contain heavy oil. Information developed under the contract will be available to other operators wishing to use the ttechnology.

The contract will be administered by the Energy Research and Development Administration, a new Federal agency to which Bureau of Mines energy research facilities and personnel have been transferred.

Site of the demonstration will be the Paris Valley Field near San Ardo, Monterey County, Calif., where an estimated 100 million barrels of heavy oil lies unproduced because it is too thick for production by conventional pumping unless it is treated in some way.

In a fireflood, part of the oil in the deposit is ignited, and the underground burning is controlled by injecting varying amounts of air. Heat and pressure combine to thin the oil and push it to a producing well. Successful demonstration of the fireflood technique could stimulate interest in production of oil from reservoirs containing similar heavy crudes in Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi, and other parts of California.

STANDING UP TO THE OIL CARTEL

This nation has been woefully lacking in innovative ideas for stanching the multibillion-dollar drain on the economy caused by the quadrupling of petroleum prices by the oil nations' cartel, the OPEC.

Three experts did suggest one possible approach the other day, however.

Economists John Perry of the Brookings Institution and M. A. Adelman of MIT, along with former Feeral Energy Administration head John C. Sawhill, testified before the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations.

The United States, they said, should adopt a quota on how much oil it will allow to enter from abroad, then seek secret bids from producing nations on the right to supply it. This would introduce competition into the oil import market.

Unfortunately — in this connection, that is — the United States is not the OPEC's largest customer. Unless we were prepared to show that we meant business, were prepared to institute a national belt-tightening the likes of which no one has yet contemplated, the oil producers might very well say, "Sorry, but if you won't pay our price, others will."

Still, it might be worth a try, if only to see how solid the front presented by the OPEC really is. As Perry pointed out, "We cannot directly break the cartel, but at least we can molest it."

Certainly, the idea has more to recommend it than going to war on the one extreme or just sitting back and taking it on the other.

Sky-Scooping Hard Hats Union Strikes For a $336 Raise Per Man Per 40-Hour Week

WASHINGTON -- Even the roofers can't top this -- and they're a tough and expensive crowd of construction workers. There's been a skilled craftsmen's strike of hard-hats right across the board in Baltimore since April 1, and a little digging into the operating engineers demands -- a word that isn't capable of understatement -- discloses they're "asking" for a total wage- fringe increase of $8.40 an hour. Right. Per man. And that's atop the current $8.93 an hour wage-fringe base.

And that would make the asking price almost a 100 per cent pay increase.

Generously they're permitting this hike of $336 per man per 40-hour week to stretch over two years. This is a raise they're seeking, not a weekly wage, just a raise atop what they're already getting. Now they argue they don't always work full 40-hour weeks. Could be. But that still doesn't lessen the awesome impact of an $8.40 an hour increase built into the basic wage foir overtime and fringe improvements.

And they do work a great many 40-hour weeks. They do roll up overtime. They do set a national precedent. And they are not alone. The striking Baltimore cement finishers are demanding a $4.30- an- hour pay-fringe hike over two years.

And there are other craftsmen seeking over $2 and $3 an hour increases.

All of which creates an elite, and in ivory tower jargon, an inherent contradiction.

There are some one million jobless construction workers, the national AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department president Bob Georgine tells us. And this isn't in a dead-end industry. In good times it handles about $138 billion annually: now it does about $10 billion less. It deeply affects every other sector of the American economy, and Georgine himself believes this is the key to our economy, and that it involves the flow of vast sums of money, materials and jobs in other industries. "It is the crisis confronting the entire society of our nation," says Georgine.

Permit me to add what some of the world's national leaders have told me -- there'll be no recession in our democratic world if there's none in the U.S. We'll recover when you do.

That, in a sense, does make Baltimore a less bloody but virtually as significant a world front as Southeast Asia.

If in Baltimore, where construction is fair to less than middling, there are demands for raises of $120 to $336 a week, what can be expected from skilled craftsmen in other parts of the nation?

Further, with thousands of building and construction regional and local union officials pouring into Washington for their "Job Crisis Conference," why are some of the 17 craft unions apparently pricing parts of their industry out of the market?

And why aren't they sharing the work by permitting sufficiently lower pay rates to allow construction projects to get to the planning boards?

Where is all that "brothers and sisters" solidarity? Why are some craft unions ripping open the slot machine without waiting for the jackpot while other unionists get the lemons?

Always it irritates some of these elitist craftsmen to see their demands reduced to socio-multiplication tables. But an $8.40 an hour (over two years)raise is a mighty hefty "request." And for the most part you can't build without an operating engineer. There are rules you know. Union rules.

So we find joblessness running as high as 65 per cent in some crafts, like the painters', and labor scarce in others -- and the big hourly rates drifting in from the West Coast at an ever swifter velocity. And we hear that the construction unions now are bitter over the environmentalists' dragging construction projects into the courts, delaying them for years. "Lawfare" the hard- hats call this.

It's true, many environmentalists do seem to prefer a stripped table in a worker's home to harm done to striped bass or a snakey river. But it's also true that many of the 235 delayed or permanently postponed power plants have been scratched from the boards because of "Labor problems and costs."

This has been the centerpiece of the discussion at what has been known as the Interim Labor Committee -- now the labor- management Collective Bargaining committee in Construction -- which will be directed by Prof. Daniel Quinn Mills.

For months now the Interim Committee, which has been meeting most Wednesday mornings, has been contacting government agencies to get work flowing. But it isn't easy.

The truth is that Baltimore is the showcase. This is a tricky situation. One striking union wants to get ahead of all the others. One batch of unions wants a big "catch-up" on inflation. The third group is just watching for the moment to jump in and scoop up as much money as possible.

There's a lot of rhetoric in the air. The time has come for them to look inward. There are good heads under those hard hats. Sturdy feet. Good muscles. Great tendency now to demonstrate. Shoulder-to-shoulder stuff when hollering at city halls, gubernatorial mansions and in congressional corridors and Washington and grand ballrooms.

But it's a new era. Even if the public wants to pay, even if the local, state and federal governments want to pay and get the men off their backs, they can't.There's just not enough money to go round. And that means fewer jobs -- in Baltimore and across the nation. And tomorrow the world. Get with it, men.

The Case of the Missing Pennies

By JACK ANDERSON
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- It looks suspiciously as if some distinguished members of congress may have sticky fingers.

In late 1973, 16 rare aluminum pennies were shown around Capitor Hill. Only two of them have been returned. The rest have mysteriously disappeared.

The missing 14 coins, according to experts, are worth thousands of dollars.

This has created an awkward predicament for the U.S. Mint, which has tried ever so delicately to retrieve the rare pennies from the Senate and House banking committees. These are the same committees, you see, which have jurisdiction over the Mint.

After repeated efforts had failed to recover the coins, the Mint's frustrated director, Mrs. May Brooks, considereed turning the matter over to the Secret Service.

But she thought better of the idea. She was reluctant, understandably, to instigate an investigation of the committees that oversee her own operations.

The strange case of the missing pennies goes back to the copper shortage. To save copper, the moneymakers thought maybe they should mint pennies from aluminum.

This required special legislation, which the Senate and House Banking committees were considering. Mrs. Brooks passed out 16 aluminum prototypes to the committee members, so they could see what the proposed aluminum pennies would look like. That's the last she saw of all but two of the sample coins.

Meanwhile, copper prices began to drop and the aluminum penny idea was abandoned. The aluminum prototypes, accordingly, were sent to the Philadelphia mint to be melted down -- that is, except for the 14 still held by the sticky-fingered legislators.

Which committee members kept the coins? Mrs. Brooks confessed to us that she has no idea. Spokesmen for both banking committees assured us they are trying to find out.

But the director of the Mint still doesn't want to offend her overseers on Capitol Hill. "I'm not worried," she told us sweetly. "The coins will show up eventually. I'm sure of that."

Footnnote: It is illegal, incidentally, for anyone to own coin patterns struck after 1916. This doesn't diminish the under-the-table value, however, of the 14 aluminum pennies.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Senate, whose members talk a lot about economy, are preparing quietly to vote another $40 million for themselves to hire more staff help.

If the past is prologue, many of the new staff members would wind up at election time doing political work for their senatorial patrons.

The argument is that the senior senators wind up with most of the available employes. Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., the Judiciary chairman, controls a budget, for example, of almost $5 million. Sen. Warren Magnuson, D.-Wash., the Commerce chairman, has $3.2 million to spend. And Sen. Harrison Williams, D.-N.J., the Labor chairman, isn't far behind with a $2.8 million budget.

Their committee payrolls are fat in contrast with such new senators as Gary Hart, D.-Colo., John Glenn, D.-Ohio, and Jake Garn, R.-Utah, who scarcely have enough clerical help to keep up with their mail.

The extra $40 million, it is argued, would give the junior senators a break. But it is more likely that the new recruits would merely swell the political force on Capitol Hill.

The $40 million would permit the hiring of more than 1,000 new staff members. But they would need space to work and Capitol Hill is already overcrowded. Still more money would have to be appropriated, therefore, to provide additional facilities.

We have had access, meanwhile, to a secret tally of the senators' payrolls. This shows many senators aren't using the fund already available to them.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R.-Vt., also wants more staff help, yet he didn't spend $143,000 that was available for this purpose last year. Sen. James Pearson, R.-Kan., another advocite of more staff money, left $134,000 in the till.

Congress would serve he public better by cutting down, not building up the payroll in Washington.

WITCH HUNT: After we exposed drug trafficking by Paraguyan officials, the military government of dictator Alfredo Stroessner began a witch hunt for our sources in Paraguay.

We have now learned that they arrested a newsman, Roberto Thompson, and held him illegally for three months simply on suspicion. But finally, Stroessner's secret police realized they had blundered and Thompson was released.

If President Ford is looking for a way to cut federal spending, and he should be, he might want to review a new book by United Press International reporter Donald Lambro. Lambro, who covers the nation's capital for the press service, has written an manuscript on how to do away with some $25 billion in federal spending. The book is appropriately titled, "The Federal Rathole."

Lambro examines 50 government programs and declares they should go. Among them: the Interstate Commerce Commission, some 1,200 federal advisory commissions, the Ex-Im Bank, the National Science Foundation Social Science Research Program, the Civil Aeronautics Board, the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities, the Women's Bureau and the Small Business Administration.

Since the proponents of the metric system are running into opposition to the change from plain, ordinary Americans, our attention has been called to the latest government innovation which is being "tested" in various parts of the country.

The government is now offering a new system of signs without words, just pictures. The purpose of this move, we understand, is to make it easier for foreigners to travel around over here.

These are not only traffic safety signs, but all kinds of signs -- lost and found, baggage lockers, shops, smoking and no smoking, telephone, bus and so on.

Everything is done in silhouette. Car rental, for example, is indicated by the front end of a car with a car key above it. A coffee shop is a picture of a coffee cup. Nothing else. No words.

These tests, supposedly, will go on for several years. Then some bureaucrat in the government will recom mend them for here and abroad.

And so, as wit the metric system, we plan still another step toward universal sameness in the old world.

Of all the nations in the Western world, only Germany is having any form of success in battling inflation. President Ford, as well as the new Congress, should examine the economic policies which have enabled this one European country to avoid the ravages of inflation while its neighbors teeter on the brink of bankruptcy.

What the German government has done to fight inflation is to slash federal spending. The move was unpopular at first, especially among those Cabinet ministers who saw their pet projects chopped from the German budget.But in just a few months, fiscal soundness paid off. While the rest of the West suffers from double-digit inflation, in Germany, despite the mammoth increases in oil prices, the rate of inflation is projected to be only 7 per cent this year.

Once the German government proved by its actions that it was serious about fighting inflation, the country's citizens responded accordingly. They sharply increased savings and cut consumer borrowing by an amazing 92 per cent.

We believe most Americans would join the fight on inflation if our federal government offered leadership by positive example instead of political double-talk.

DETERMINATION NEEDED

The real facts of the energy shortage are startlingly simple. Unless new sources of energy are developed in the next few years, the United States faces a genuine energy crisis in which the wheels of industry could stop and the lights in our homes go out.

While the situation is serious in the extreme, it is far from hopeless. This nation has a supply of coal estimated to be adequate for several hundred years. It is hypothesized that 55 percent of the discoverable oil and 66 percent of this country's gas are still waiting to be found. Huge deposits of oil shales and tar sands have not even been tapped. If the nation's electric companies are permitted to build the facilities they need -- particularly nuclear generating stations -- we can take care of our requirements for electricity, that most versatile form of energy. In short, the U.S. has just about everything it needs to solve this problem except the determination to do what is necessary.

At this point in time, more than anything else, we need a national desire to pull ourselves up by our own bootstraps and make the necessary decisions to implant programs which will encourage development of our domestic energy resources. We, as a nation, must be prepared to accept the fact that prices of gasoline and electric power will have to rise if investment funds are to be forthcoming as needed to finance the massive research development and construction programs required. Alaska's North Slope contains an estimated 10 billion barrels of oil, but we must halt delay in construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline before this source of petroleum can be made available. Drilling on the Outer Continental Shelf is an absolute must and could increase annual domestic petroleum supplies by an estimated 1.5 billion barrels. In addition, ways must be found to use our vast coal supplies in an environmentally-acceptable manner.

The time for wishful thinking that the energy crisis will go away, or that it can be corrected by importing greater quantities of petroleum from other nations is long past. The U.S. will be assured of having adequate energy supplies only when it uses its own initiative to develop its own resources.

XXX

CONSERVATION IS ENERGY MONEY-SAVER

At the recent National Governors' Conference in Washington, 28 state chief executives called for a voluntary conservation program "of massive proportions" for a trial period of four to six months before the government attempts to curb oil consumption by harsher means.

Their voices join a growing chorus. Shortly before the governors convened, the National Research Council, a branch of the National Academy of Sciences, made the alarming report that the nation's actual reserves of recoverable oil and gas may be less than half that estimated by government energy analysts and claimed that the goal of energy self-sufficiency by the 1980s is "essentially impossible."

Among other steps, the council recommended a "conservation ethic" which, in the words of Dr. Brian J. Skinner, chairman of the panel that produced the study, should become "kind of a national religion."

But just how much hope does conservation promise?

In a letter to President Ford in January, David Rickelton, president of the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers, outlined a number of proposals he said could save 7.5 to 10 per cent of the total energy used in the U.S. — the equivalent of 3 to 4 million barrels of oil a day.

While we are learning how to harness such exotic forms of energy as sunlight and the heat inside the earth, savings can be made now by the use of existing technology applied to existing structures, said Rickelton, without fueling inflation as the $3 tax on oil would do or creating an enormous bureaucracy as rationing would do.

As an example of what a single company can accomplish, for the 12-month period ending Oct. 31, 1974, General Mills reduced its in-house energy consumption by 9.8 per cent, for a savings of $1.5 million in fuel costs.

Continental Oil Company has launched an internal conservation program aimed at a 15 per cent reduction in its energy consumption, ranging from turning off unnecessary lights to making sure that boilers and furnaces are programmed for the most efficient operation.

According to Ken Gerhart, director of the program, the 15 per cent reduction would add up to an annual savings of $28 million for the company, but more important, would be the equivalent of finding a new oil field producing over 8,000 barrels a day.

"A substantial degree of energy conservation is an attainable goal for the nation," says Dr. John G. Myers, author of an analysis by the Conference Board.

He notes that the industrial sector of the economy, mainly manufacturing, consumes about 40 per cent of all the energy used in the U.S. Yet while manufacturing output rose 4.3 per cent a year between 1947 and 1971, energy use expanded only 2.7 per cent — this during a period when energy was becoming cheaper in relation to other goods.

The continuing introduction of energy-saving equipment is likely to result in sizable cutbacks in the use of energy over the next decade, he predicts.

But will Americans really get "conservation religion"?

Consider the city of Danville, Va. Faced with a shut-down of its industries this winter because of a 55.5 per cent cutback in natural gas deliveries, the community voluntarily reduced the use of gas for heating by businesses and residences to keep the factories going.

Nationally, electricity output, which jumped 7.1 per cent a year from 1960 to 1973, did not rise last year. Gasoline sales during last summer's peak driving months were 1 per cent below 1973, after climbing 4.6 per cent a year from 1950.

We can cut down on energy use more cheaply than we can expand domestic supplies, points out Dr. Myers, and we would gain the added benefits of less ecological damage while having to spend less on environmental protection.

GOVERNMENT, INDUSTRY SPLIT COST OF TESTING NEW OIL RECOVERY PLAN

Fireflooding — a way of heating deposits of heavy crude oil to thin the oil so it can be pumped to the surface — will be demonstrated under a $6,791,800 cost-sharing agreement with the Husky Oil Company, the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines announced recently.

The Cody, Wyo., firm has put up $4,791,800, and the government, $2 million, for a 51-month demonstration of the fireflood as a technique for stimulating reservoirs that contain heavy oil. Information developed under the contract will be available to other operators wishing to use the ttechnology.

The contract will be administered by the Energy Research and Development Administration, a new Federal agency to which Bureau of Mines energy research facilities and personnel have been transferred.

Site of the demonstration will be the Paris Valley Field near San Ardo, Monterey County, Calif., where an estimated 100 million barrels of heavy oil lies unproduced because it is too thick for production by conventional pumping unless it is treated in some way.

In a fireflood, part of the oil in the deposit is ignited, and the underground burning is controlled by injecting varying amounts of air. Heat and pressure combine to thin the oil and push it to a producing well. Successful demonstration of the fireflood technique could stimulate interest in production of oil from reservoirs containing similar heavy crudes in Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi, and other parts of California.

STANDING UP TO THE OIL CARTEL

This nation has been woefully lacking in innovative ideas for stanching the multibillion-dollar drain on the economy caused by the quadrupling of petroleum prices by the oil nations' cartel, the OPEC.

Three experts did suggest one possible approach the other day, however.

Economists John Perry of the Brookings Institution and M. A. Adelman of MIT, along with former Feeral Energy Administration head John C. Sawhill, testified before the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations.

The United States, they said, should adopt a quota on how much oil it will allow to enter from abroad, then seek secret bids from producing nations on the right to supply it. This would introduce competition into the oil import market.

Unfortunately — in this connection, that is — the United States is not the OPEC's largest customer. Unless we were prepared to show that we meant business, were prepared to institute a national belt-tightening the likes of which no one has yet contemplated, the oil producers might very well say, "Sorry, but if you won't pay our price, others will."

Still, it might be worth a try, if only to see how solid the front presented by the OPEC really is. As Perry pointed out, "We cannot directly break the cartel, but at least we can molest it."

Certainly, the idea has more to recommend it than going to war on the one extreme or just sitting back and taking it on the other.

Sky-Scooping Hard Hats Union Strikes For a $336 Raise Per Man Per 40-Hour Week

WASHINGTON -- Even the roofers can't top this -- and they're a tough and expensive crowd of construction workers. There's been a skilled craftsmen's strike of hard-hats right across the board in Baltimore since April 1, and a little digging into the operating engineers demands -- a word that isn't capable of understatement -- discloses they're "asking" for a total wage- fringe increase of $8.40 an hour. Right. Per man. And that's atop the current $8.93 an hour wage-fringe base.

And that would make the asking price almost a 100 per cent pay increase.

Generously they're permitting this hike of $336 per man per 40-hour week to stretch over two years. This is a raise they're seeking, not a weekly wage, just a raise atop what they're already getting. Now they argue they don't always work full 40-hour weeks. Could be. But that still doesn't lessen the awesome impact of an $8.40 an hour increase built into the basic wage foir overtime and fringe improvements.

And they do work a great many 40-hour weeks. They do roll up overtime. They do set a national precedent. And they are not alone. The striking Baltimore cement finishers are demanding a $4.30- an- hour pay-fringe hike over two years.

And there are other craftsmen seeking over $2 and $3 an hour increases.

All of which creates an elite, and in ivory tower jargon, an inherent contradiction.

There are some one million jobless construction workers, the national AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department president Bob Georgine tells us. And this isn't in a dead-end industry. In good times it handles about $138 billion annually: now it does about $10 billion less. It deeply affects every other sector of the American economy, and Georgine himself believes this is the key to our economy, and that it involves the flow of vast sums of money, materials and jobs in other industries. "It is the crisis confronting the entire society of our nation," says Georgine.

Permit me to add what some of the world's national leaders have told me -- there'll be no recession in our democratic world if there's none in the U.S. We'll recover when you do.

That, in a sense, does make Baltimore a less bloody but virtually as significant a world front as Southeast Asia.

If in Baltimore, where construction is fair to less than middling, there are demands for raises of $120 to $336 a week, what can be expected from skilled craftsmen in other parts of the nation?

Further, with thousands of building and construction regional and local union officials pouring into Washington for their "Job Crisis Conference," why are some of the 17 craft unions apparently pricing parts of their industry out of the market?

And why aren't they sharing the work by permitting sufficiently lower pay rates to allow construction projects to get to the planning boards?

Where is all that "brothers and sisters" solidarity? Why are some craft unions ripping open the slot machine without waiting for the jackpot while other unionists get the lemons?

Always it irritates some of these elitist craftsmen to see their demands reduced to socio-multiplication tables. But an $8.40 an hour (over two years)raise is a mighty hefty "request." And for the most part you can't build without an operating engineer. There are rules you know. Union rules.

So we find joblessness running as high as 65 per cent in some crafts, like the painters', and labor scarce in others -- and the big hourly rates drifting in from the West Coast at an ever swifter velocity. And we hear that the construction unions now are bitter over the environmentalists' dragging construction projects into the courts, delaying them for years. "Lawfare" the hard- hats call this.

It's true, many environmentalists do seem to prefer a stripped table in a worker's home to harm done to striped bass or a snakey river. But it's also true that many of the 235 delayed or permanently postponed power plants have been scratched from the boards because of "Labor problems and costs."

This has been the centerpiece of the discussion at what has been known as the Interim Labor Committee -- now the labor- management Collective Bargaining committee in Construction -- which will be directed by Prof. Daniel Quinn Mills.

For months now the Interim Committee, which has been meeting most Wednesday mornings, has been contacting government agencies to get work flowing. But it isn't easy.

The truth is that Baltimore is the showcase. This is a tricky situation. One striking union wants to get ahead of all the others. One batch of unions wants a big "catch-up" on inflation. The third group is just watching for the moment to jump in and scoop up as much money as possible.

There's a lot of rhetoric in the air. The time has come for them to look inward. There are good heads under those hard hats. Sturdy feet. Good muscles. Great tendency now to demonstrate. Shoulder-to-shoulder stuff when hollering at city halls, gubernatorial mansions and in congressional corridors and Washington and grand ballrooms.

But it's a new era. Even if the public wants to pay, even if the local, state and federal governments want to pay and get the men off their backs, they can't.There's just not enough money to go round. And that means fewer jobs -- in Baltimore and across the nation. And tomorrow the world. Get with it, men.

The Case of the Missing Pennies

By JACK ANDERSON
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- It looks suspiciously as if some distinguished members of congress may have sticky fingers.

In late 1973, 16 rare aluminum pennies were shown around Capitor Hill. Only two of them have been returned. The rest have mysteriously disappeared.

The missing 14 coins, according to experts, are worth thousands of dollars.

This has created an awkward predicament for the U.S. Mint, which has tried ever so delicately to retrieve the rare pennies from the Senate and House banking committees. These are the same committees, you see, which have jurisdiction over the Mint.

After repeated efforts had failed to recover the coins, the Mint's frustrated director, Mrs. May Brooks, considereed turning the matter over to the Secret Service.

But she thought better of the idea. She was reluctant, understandably, to instigate an investigation of the committees that oversee her own operations.

The strange case of the missing pennies goes back to the copper shortage. To save copper, the moneymakers thought maybe they should mint pennies from aluminum.

This required special legislation, which the Senate and House Banking committees were considering. Mrs. Brooks passed out 16 aluminum prototypes to the committee members, so they could see what the proposed aluminum pennies would look like. That's the last she saw of all but two of the sample coins.

Meanwhile, copper prices began to drop and the aluminum penny idea was abandoned. The aluminum prototypes, accordingly, were sent to the Philadelphia mint to be melted down -- that is, except for the 14 still held by the sticky-fingered legislators.

Which committee members kept the coins? Mrs. Brooks confessed to us that she has no idea. Spokesmen for both banking committees assured us they are trying to find out.

But the director of the Mint still doesn't want to offend her overseers on Capitol Hill. "I'm not worried," she told us sweetly. "The coins will show up eventually. I'm sure of that."

Footnnote: It is illegal, incidentally, for anyone to own coin patterns struck after 1916. This doesn't diminish the under-the-table value, however, of the 14 aluminum pennies.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Senate, whose members talk a lot about economy, are preparing quietly to vote another $40 million for themselves to hire more staff help.

If the past is prologue, many of the new staff members would wind up at election time doing political work for their senatorial patrons.

The argument is that the senior senators wind up with most of the available employes. Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., the Judiciary chairman, controls a budget, for example, of almost $5 million. Sen. Warren Magnuson, D.-Wash., the Commerce chairman, has $3.2 million to spend. And Sen. Harrison Williams, D.-N.J., the Labor chairman, isn't far behind with a $2.8 million budget.

Their committee payrolls are fat in contrast with such new senators as Gary Hart, D.-Colo., John Glenn, D.-Ohio, and Jake Garn, R.-Utah, who scarcely have enough clerical help to keep up with their mail.

The extra $40 million, it is argued, would give the junior senators a break. But it is more likely that the new recruits would merely swell the political force on Capitol Hill.

The $40 million would permit the hiring of more than 1,000 new staff members. But they would need space to work and Capitol Hill is already overcrowded. Still more money would have to be appropriated, therefore, to provide additional facilities.

We have had access, meanwhile, to a secret tally of the senators' payrolls. This shows many senators aren't using the fund already available to them.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R.-Vt., also wants more staff help, yet he didn't spend $143,000 that was available for this purpose last year. Sen. James Pearson, R.-Kan $143,000 that was available for this purpose last year. Sen. James Pearson, R.-Kan., another advocite of more staff money, left $134,000 in the till.

Congress would serve he public better by cutting down, not building up the payroll in Washington.

WITCH HUNT: After we exposed drug trafficking by Paraguyan officials, the military government of dictator Alfredo Stroessner began a witch hunt for our sources in Paraguay.

We have now learned that they arrested a newsman, Roberto Thompson, and held him illegally for three months simply on suspicion. But finally, Stroessner's secret police realized they had blundered and Thompson was released.

Bonding firm not liable for Sikeston bank loss

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The 8th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that a bonding company is not liable for a $120,359 loss by the First National Bank of Sikeston, Mo.

The ruling Thursday reversed a lower court decision against Transamerica Insurance Co.

A St.Louis District Court had ruled in 1972 that Transamerica had to pay the bank for the transactions of bank President Donald P. Bohannon. He had permission from the bank to use bank funds in personal livestock transactions.

The appeals court said Transamerica was not liable because the bank had "adequate knowledge of fraudulent and dishonest acts" by Bohannon prior to the loss.

Bohannon was president of the bank from 1966 until January 1971.

Bonding firm not liable for Sikeston bank loss

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The 8th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that a bonding company is not liable for a $120,359 loss by the First National Bank of Sikeston, Mo.

The ruling Thursday reversed a lower court decision against Transamerica Insurance Co.

A St.Louis District Court had ruled in 1972 that Transamerica had to pay the bank for the transactions of bank President Donald P. Bohannon. He had permission from the bank to use bank funds in personal livestock transactions.

The appeals court said Transamerica was not liable because the bank had "adequate knowledge of fraudulent and dishonest acts" by Bohannon prior to the loss.

Bohannon was president of the bank from 1966 until January 1971.

Ann Landers

Mother complains of grown, freeloading sons

Dear Ann Landers: We have two grown sons (mid 20s) who could hardly wait to leave home and get away from their square parents. They wanted complete freedom to do their own thing. So off they went with our assurance that we loved them and they could always come home if things got rough.

That was five years ago. They have come home several times, separately, and a couple of horrible times when their "homecoming" coincided.

The first time they returned we were glad to see them--relieved that they were O.K. True, they brought their lifestyles with them--TV from midnight 'til dawn and sleeping past noon. They spent hours on the phone (including long-distance which we paid for). We finally insisted they get jobs, but both boys were highly insulted when we suggested that they contribute something to the food bills. Eventually they took off again.

To date they've been home four times after having traveled all over the U.S., holding some good jobs but quitting when they became bored with the straight life. They are both home at present, sponging off Mom and Dad.

We are sick of it. We never thought we could ever say to our own sons, "Keep moving. We can't stand your freeloading any longer." But WE do feel this way and it's killing us.

We thought we raised our sons to stand on their own two feet-church, paper routes, jobs after school and savings accounts. We tried to set a fine example by being good citizens. But something didn't take. What's the answer, Ann?--The Old Folks At Home (Columbus, Ohio)

Dear Folks: What's the question. Should you feel guilty because you've told your sons the free hotel is no longer operating? Forget it!

Your big mistake was not establishing the ground rules after the first "homecoming." To allow grown men to watch TV all night and sleep 'til noon doesn't square with the way they were raised.

Now that the safety net has been removed, your sons will have to make it on their own or else. Home can be a port in a storm, once, but to let grown men feel they can fall in and freeload whenever they get bored working is a very destructive and crippling mechanism. Would you believe some parents use this techique to keep their kids tied to them forever?

Dear Ann Landers: I am 36 years old, considered attactive and am normal in every respect. My husband is 39. I admire him as a person and am very thankful that he has given me two lovely daughters, but--I would appreciate it if he didn't make any more sexual demands on me.

In case you are wondering if I have another love interest, let me assure you I have not. I spend most of my time at home cooking, baking, cleaning and sewing for the girls. My husband is a great reader of books. He is average-looking, neat about his person and never goes anythere at night without me. We have a nice marriage--no fights.

I guess what I'm asking is this: Is it all right for me not to want any more sex? Please give me your opinion.--Don't Need It.

Dear D.N.I.: It's all right with ME. What does your husband say? If he's content, you have no problem. If he complains, however, you'd better see a doctor and find out why at 36 you have no sex drive. It could be physical. And it it's psychological, you'd better look into THAT.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism--Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Ann Landers

Mother complains of grown, freeloading sons

Dear Ann Landers: We have two grown sons (mid 20s) who could hardly wait to leave home and get away from their square parents. They wanted complete freedom to do their own thing. So off they went with our assurance that we loved them and they could always come home if things got rough.

That was five years ago. They have come home several times, separately, and a couple of horrible times when their "homecoming" coincided.

The first time they returned we were glad to see them--relieved that they were O.K. True, they brought their lifestyles with them--TV from midnight 'til dawn and sleeping past noon. They spent hours on the phone (including long-distance which we paid for). We finally insisted they get jobs, but both boys were highly insulted when we suggested that they contribute something to the food bills. Eventually they took off again.

To date they've been home four times after having traveled all over the U.S., holding some good jobs but quitting when they became bored with the straight life. They are both home at present, sponging off Mom and Dad.

We are sick of it. We never thought we could ever say to our own sons, "Keep moving. We can't stand your freeloading any longer." But WE do feel this way and it's killing us.

We thought we raised our sons to stand on their own two feet--church, paper routes, jobs after school and savings accounts. We tried to set a fine example by being good citizens. But something didn't take. What's the answer, Ann?--The Old Folks At Home (Columbus, Ohio)

Dear Folks: What's the question. Should you feel guilty because you've told your sons the free hotel is no longer operating? Forget it!

Your big mistake was not establishing the ground rules after the first "homecoming." To allow grown men to watch TV all night and sleep 'til noon doesn't square with the way they were raised.

Now that the safety net has been removed, your sons will have to make it on their own or else. Home can be a port in a storm, once, but to let grown men feel they can fall in and freeload whenever they get bored working is a very destructive and crippling mechanism. Would you believe some parents use this techique to keep their kids tied to them forever?

Dear Ann Landers: I am 36 years old, considered attactive and am normal in every respect. My husband is 39. I admire him as a person and am very thankful that he has given me two lovely daughters, but--I would appreciate it if he didn't make any more sexual demands on me.

Malden athlete signs $77,000 pact

MURRAY, Ky., -- Murray State University's all-America running back, Don Clayton, has signed a three-year contract with the New England Patriots for a total of $77,000 . He was signed as a halfback and will begin training in July at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

Clayton, who holds both career and season records for rushing yardage at Murray State, was drafted in the 15th round of the annual National Football League draft. he was the 14th choice of the Patriots.

The 6-2, 205- pound Murray State senior attended the Patriot camp April 4-7 in Tampa, Fla.

"After going to camp, I felt pretty good about making the team," said Clayton, "and I think I'll get to play this coming season. I couldn't be with a better team."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clayton of Malden, Mo., Clayton is a former high school all-American.

Clayton began his college career at Murray State in 1970 but was sidelined that year with a serious knee injury. When his knee was re-injured in 1971, he was red-shirted for that season. He returned as a sophomore in eligibility in 1972.

In 1973 Clayton was selected by the America Football Coaches Association to the Kodak college Division I all-America team. He was one of only three juniors chosen.

During his career at Murray State, Calyton led the Racers to a 7-3 in 1973 and a 9-2 in 1974 in the Ohio Valley conference. He ended his career at Murray State with 1,257 yards in 276 carries his senior year for an average of 4.6 an attempt and 114.3 a game. Breaking the Murray career records for rushing yardage and rushing attempts, Clayton brought the records to 2,804 yards and 557 attempts. He also holds the single season rushing record with 1,403 yards during his junior year.

Murray State coach Bill Furgerson has nothing but praise for Clayton. Commenting on the Patriots' selection of Clayton, he said, "The biggest thing about Don is his size and speed. He is 6-2 , weighs 205 pounds, and runs the 40- yard- dash in 4.5. His biggest asset is his durability. He is definately in the same class as the pro people. Combine his physical strength and his great attitude on life and you have the makings for a successful pro athlete."

While on the subject of conservation, we see where Gov. Christopher S. Bond has set May 2 as fishing day in Missouri.

The official proclamation of fishing day in Missouri began in 1964 under the administration of Gov. John M. Dalton.

Basically, it is a rite of spring occasion, with the Governor urging the citizenry to forget cares and woes and find peace gazing at a gobbler.

The Governor's proclamation reads:

WHEREAS, the sight of a fishing lure, even in the depression of a gray winter day, is known to brighten the outlook of an angler; and

WHEREAS, Missouri has a tradition of fishing that stands proudly beside its many other lustrous traditions; and

WHEREAS, work should be fun and is positively known to be more fun if the worker punctuates periods of it with periods of recreation, especially fishing; and

WHEREAS, a healthy citizenry is a happy citizenry and fishing is highly contagious and can only be cured by a day on the water, fishing rod in hand; and

WHEREAS, Missouri's leadership in such programs as catch and release of sport fish has resulted in many more catchable fish; and

WHEREAS, when the spring sun rises and warms the blooming hillsides and the mist eddies across still water, broken only by the sharp slap of a feeding bass, there is no person alive who cannot but yearn for a day outdoors; NOW, therefore, I Christopher S. Bond, Governor of the State of Missouri and a fisherman highly sympathetic to those with the irresistible urge to go fishing, do hereby proclaim May 2, 1975, as FISHING DAY in Missouri and urge Missourians and visitors fortunate enough to be in the state on May 2, to find a bit of promising water and commune with the end of a fishing line.

Applications are now being accepted for a limited number of full scholarships to enable qualified and needy young golfers to participate in this coming summer's Johnny Miller Golf Academy in Scotland. Announcement of the scholarships was made today by The American Leadership Study Groups of Worcester, Massachusetts, operators of the Miller golf academy.

Michael Forhan, Academy director, announced that funds for these grants had just been donated by the Gillette Safety Razor Company to Miller in recognition of his being named both "Golfer of the Year" and "Athlete of the Year" by a national poll of sports fans. Miller announced last week on the nationally televised Bob Hope Cavalcade of Champions that his award would go to sponsor the trip for several needy teen-age golfers.

The ALSG Johnny Miller Golf Academy in Scotland combines three weeks of intensive instruction with daily play on the championship courses near St. Andrew's, Scotland.Sightseeing in Madrid and London, plus visits to the 1975 British Open at Carnoustie are also included in the program.

Recommendations from golf coaches or youth leaders on behalf of qualified young men or women who would benefit from the scholarship should be sent to The ALSG Johnny Miller Golf Academy, 375 Airport Drive, Worcester, Massachusetts, 01602.

Early turkey season

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri turkey hunters face a cold-blooded situation in the April 21- May 4 season and it's expected to have an effect on their success.

"This season is about three weeks early," says John Lewis, turkey biologist for the Department of Conservation. "The cold spring has everything slowed down, including gobblers."

Lewis thinks that the open woods will make it tough for hunters since hiding from gobblers will be difficult. And gobblers still will be with hens and will be more difficult to lure in with a hen call.

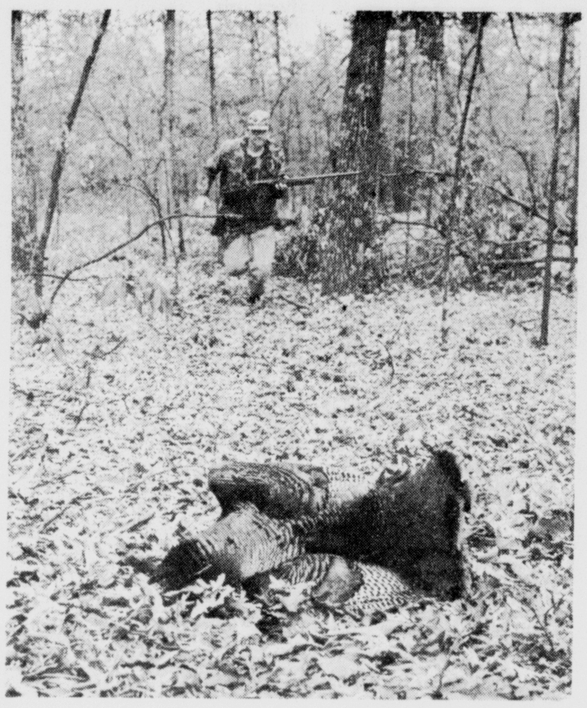
As if this weren't enough, there is expected to be a lack of two-year-old birds which usually make up the bulk of the hunting bag because of a poor nesting season two years ago.

"Hunters will be trying to call in those wily old gobblers," Lewis says. "And that's bound to have an effect on hunting success."

The season is open in 74 counties, including seven new ones -- Cape Girardeau, Cole, Howard, Linn, Moniteau, Ralls and Randolph. Hours are from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. CDT and legal weapons are shotguns with shot or longbow.

Bearded birds only are legal and the season limit is one. All turkeys must be tagged either with a $7.90 resident permit, a $30.40 non-resident permit or in the case of farmers hunting where they reside, a home-made tag, and all turkeys must be checked with head and plumage intact in the county where the bird is taken or an adjoining one between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. CDT on the day taken.

There have been between 25,000 and 30,000 turkey hunters the last two seasons and in each of them, the bag exceeded 5,000 birds. Hunter success since modern turkey seasons began in 1960 has been about 20 per cent.



Missour's turkey season runs April 21- May 4, with one bearded bird legal. There will be 74 open counties, including seven new ones. Hunting hours are 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. CDT Hunting is expected to be tougher this year because of the open woods and because gobblers probably still will be with hens and will be tougher to call.

While on the subject of conservation, we see where Gov. Christopher S. Bond has set May 2 as fishing day in Missouri.

The official proclamation of fishing day in Missouri began in 1964 under the administration of Gov. John M. Dalton.

Basically, it is a rite of spring occasion, with the Governor urging the citizenry to forget cares and woes and find peace gazing at a gobbler.

The Governor's proclamation reads:

WHEREAS, the sight of a fishing lure, even in the depression of a gray winter day, is known to brighten the outlook of an angler; and

WHEREAS, Missouri has a tradition of fishing that stands proudly beside its many other lustrous traditions; and

WHEREAS, work should be fun and is positively known to be more fun if the worker punctuates periods of it with periods of recreation, especially fishing; and

WHEREAS, a healthy citizenry is a happy citizenry and fishing is highly contagious and can only be cured by a day on the water, fishing rod in hand; and

WHEREAS, Missouri's leadership in such programs as catch and release of sport fish has resulted in many more catchable fish; and

WHEREAS, when the spring sun rises and warms the blooming hillsides and the mist eddies across still water, broken only by the sharp slap of a feeding bass, there is no person alive who cannot but yearn for a day outdoors; NOW, therefore, I Christopher S. Bond, Governor of the State of Missouri and a fisherman highly sympathetic to those with the irresistible urge to go fishing, do hereby proclaim May 2, 1975, as FISHING DAY in Missouri and urge Missourians and visitors fortunate enough to be in the state on May 2, to find a bit of promising water and commune with the end of a fishing line.

Applications are now being accepted for a limited number of full scholarships to enable qualified and needy young golfers to participate in this coming summer's Johnny Miller Golf Academy in Scotland. Announcement of the scholarships was made today by The American Leadership Study Groups of Worcester, Massachusetts, operators of the Miller golf academy.

Michael Forhan, Academy director, announced that funds for these grants had just been donated by the Gillette Safety Razor Company to Miller in recognition of his being named both "Golfer of the Year" and "Athlete of the Year" by a national poll of sports fans. Miller announced last week on the nationally televised Bob Hope Cavalcade of Champions that his award would go to sponsor the trip for several needy teen-age golfers.

The ALSG Johnny Miller Golf Academy in Scotland combines three weeks of intensive instruction with daily play on the championship courses near St. Andrew's, Scotland.Sightseeing in Madrid and London, plus visits to the 1975 British Open at Carnoustie are also included in the program.

Recommendations from golf coaches or youth leaders on behalf of qualified young men or women who would benefit from the scholarship should be sent to The ALSG Johnny Miller Golf Academy, 375 Airport Drive, Worcester, Massachusetts, 01602.

Early turkey season

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri turkey hunters face a cold-blooded situation in the April 21- May 4 season and it's expected to have an effect on their success.

"This season is about three weeks early," says John Lewis, turkey biologist for the Department of Conservation. "The cold spring has everything slowed down, including gobblers."

Lewis thinks that the open woods will make it tough for hunters since hiding from gobblers will be difficult. And gobblers still will be with hens and will be more difficult to lure in with a hen call.

As if this weren't enough, there is expected to be a lack of two-year-old birds which usually make up the bulk of the hunting bag because of a poor nesting season two years ago.

"Hunters will be trying to call in those wily old gobblers," Lewis says. "And that's bound to have an effect on hunting success."

The season is open in 74 counties, including seven new ones -- Cape Girardeau, Cole, Howard, Linn, Moniteau, Ralls and Randolph. Hours are from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. CDT and legal weapons are shotguns with shot or longbow.

Bearded birds only are legal and the season limit is one. All turkeys must be tagged either with a $7.90 resident permit, a $30.40 non-resident permit or in the case of farmers hunting where they reside, a home-made tag, and all turkeys must be checked with head and plumage intact in the county where the bird is taken or an adjoining one between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. CDT on the day taken.

There have been between 25,000 and 30,000 turkey hunters the last two seasons and in each of them, the bag exceeded 5,000 birds. Hunter success since modern turkey seasons began in 1960 has been about 20 per cent.

Missour's turkey season runs April 21- May 4, with one bearded bird legal. There will be 74 open counties, including seven new ones. Hunting hours are 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. CDT Hunting is expected to be tougher this year because of the open woods and because gobblers probably still will be with hens and will be tougher to call.

Lefties hand cuff Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Left-handers Ken Brett and Jim Rooker have passed their tests, and the Pittsburgh Pirates may be off and running in National League baseball.

The 5-foot-11 Brett, who hadn't piched in a game since March 25, proved his fitness Sunday by stopping the St. Louis Cardinals on four hits through six innings and watching reliever Dave Giusti mop up.

Brett's form in a 5-0 Pirates victory followed a route-going winning performance a night earlier by Rooker and left Manager Danny Murtaugh in a euphoric mood.

"I said before that if our pitchers recover from their injuries we've got a heck of a chance to have a good staff," Murtaugh noted optimistically.

"I was pleasantly surprised by what Brett did," Murtaugh added. "I like his control from the point that he had good stuff and was the ball over the plate."

Brett, who underwent surgery during the off-season to remove bone chips from his elbow, had been idle for nearly a month after popping a muscle in throwing arm during spring training.

"I'd been throwing live batting practice," the 26-year-old pitcher sad, "but it's a different situation than throwing in a game.

"I knew I'd feel good physically," he added. "It was just a question of whether I'd go out there and get ahead of the batters. It turned out better than I'd expected."

A four-run Pirates second inning, abetted by losing pitcher John Denny's costly error, nelped keep the pressure off Brett, who faced only 23 batters and was aided by a double play.

Richie Zisk ignited the burst with a double off the wall, and Denny's error on Brett's grounder to the mound came between two singles and Richie Hebner's two-run triple.

"Those guys," lamented the 22-year-old Denny, 2-1. "You pitch them the way the books says and they hit a ground ball the other way and it goes through for a hit."

"They have size and they hit the ball," Cards Manager Red Schoendienst noted of the Pirates, however. "When they go in the hole that's part of the game."

Before departing as planned, Brett capped his season's bow with a towering home run, his 10th in the majors and a shot off reliever Mike Garman that opened the seventh inning.

"I choked up on the bat a couple of inches," the stocky pitcher explained. "When I hit the ball it just went farther than expected."

Leaving the Cards' Schoendienst in a sour frame of mind was a production by his team of only an unearned run in 18 innings against Rooker, Brett and Giusti.

"We're going to have to start hitting left-handers," Schoendienst insisted. "We've got some guys right now who are a little flat. We're just going to have to get them out of it."

Miss Palmer wins $200,000

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Palmer. That's about all there is to say about the 1975 $200,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle Golf Tournament.

She almost made the world's most expensive women's golf tournament a bore. Then she added a dash of excitement at the end as she won the event she had led from start to finish.

Coolly composed through chilly winds and then warm desert breezes, the miniscule Ft. Worth, Tex., native ran off three consecutive two-under-par 70s then finally slipped up a bit when she bogeyed the last hole for a 73 Sunday but still finished with a five-under-par 283, one stroke in front of Kathy McMullen.

"I really got sort of tired," the 5-foot-1 Miss Palmer said afterwards, slumping in a chair. "And anytime you get tired ygu make mental mistakes like I made." She made three bogies on the final round, one more than she had in the three earlier rounds combined.

"I'm just glad it came at the end," she added.

Miss Palmer's three earlier rounds on the 6,347-yard Mission Hills course, a par-72, kept her ahead by at least a stroke from the outset and she took a three-stroke lead over Miss McMullen into the final 18 holes after her challenger charged in with 66 Saturday.

"I really felt ths pressure out there and I had to hit every shot in my bag because McMullen was playing so well," she said. "I think I played better than I know how. When you're leading you know they're coming at you and it's a miserable feeling."

Miss Palmer held a three-stroke lead over Miss McMullen, her closest pursuer, going into the final nine holes.

But the sturdy blonde from Florida, still seeking her first victory on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, birdied the 11th and 12th holes and quickly pulled to within a stroke of the lead. Miss Palmer, in the threesome behind her competitor, took a stroke back when she birdied the 12th herself and Miss McMullen fell to the pressure when she doubled bogies the 14th hole.

Miss Palmer collected $32,000 for the victory and $3,000 more for leading three rounds. Miss McMullen won $21,000 for second, more than she has ever amassed in any one of her five years as a pro.

Carol Mann, Chako Higuchi of Japan and Carole Jo Skala tied for third, four strokes off the pace at one-under-par 287, each winning $10,500, and a half-dozen including early challenger Jocelyne Bourassa and Jane Blalock were tied for sixth at one over par. The spunky Miss Bourassa, a favorite of the crowds, fell out of contention when she bogeyed three straight hopes on the back nine Sunday.

Sue Roberts, a two-time winner on the tour last year who captured the Bing Crosby International in Mexico last month, and veteran Marlene Hagge, on the tour for 25 years, each won $5,000 for sinking a hole-in-one during the tournament.

The tournament matches only golfers who have top three finishes on the LPGA tour.

State fish candidates

JEFFERSON CITY — Once again it appears that Missouri will have to suffer through the year without a state fish.

There is no movement afoot in the current session of the Legislature to name a state fish, though the burning issue has cropped up periodically in previous sessions.

There are a number of equally devoted factions pushing for the bluegill, the largemouth bass, the smallmouth bass and the channel catfish. Other cliques promote the green sunfish, longear sunfish or crappie.

At present, 20 states have official state fish and New York probably will consider the brook trout for its fish this year.

Alabama has the tarpon, Alaska the king or chinook salmon, Arkansas largemouth bass, California golden trout, Illinois bluegill, Kentucky spotted or Kentucky bass, Maine Atlantic salmon, Maryland rockfish or striped bass, Michigan brook trout, Minnesota walleye, New Mexico cutthroat trout, North Carolina channel bass or red drum, Ohio smallmouth bass, Oklahoma sand or white bass, Oregon king or chinook salmon, Pennsylvania brook trout, South Carolina stripped bass, Utah rainbow trout, Washington steelhead trout and Wisconsin muskellunge.

Two years ago there were 14 official state fish, so the finny crusade is spreading.

The argument for each possible Missouri fish is valid and convincing and each faction is utterly dedicated to its fish.

Would the members of Missouri's 60 or more bass clubs support the bluegill? Not if you flogged them with rose branches. Would the supporters of the bluegill, the small boy's friend, give in to the rest? Not if you stuck their hand in muskellunges' mouths.

Channel catfish anglers would invite you out in the parking lot if you promoted something else in their hearing and the crappie fishermen say, correctly, that their fish is the most sought-after in Missouri lakes.

Missouri already has a state rock, (Mozarkite), state bird, (bluebird), a state tree, (dogwood), and a state flower, (hawthorn). There are proposals to name the bat the state mammal and either the honey bee or the Monarch butterfly the state insect.

As for the state fish, how about the carp? The fish will have been in Missouri for 100 years come 1976. It will be America's bi-centennial and the centennial of the carp of Missouri.

Surely that is cause for celebration -- perhaps a statewide Carp Festival or an endurance fishing contest (a Carpathon). There could be educational tent shows (Carp Tarps).

Then, it might just be better to wait another hundred years and see what happens...

LIVONIA, Mich. (AP) — A track record trifecta payoff was set Sunday at Detroit Race Course in the 10th race when the 97-1 longshot Double Cousin finished third and set up a $30,-453 return.

Two unideintified bettors held the giant payoff tickets.

The old trifecta record of $21,853 was set August 31, 1972.

Chiefs waive Hayes

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Running back Wendell Hayes has been waived by the Kansas City Chiefs.

The National Football League club said Saturday the new-look Chiefs had discarded any plans for the use yes in 1975. Hayes had pla in the Chiefs' backfield seven seasons.

One of the factors involved in the decision to place Hayes on waivers was the emergency of Cleophus Miller as a fine, young runner last year. Hayes is 34.

Lefties hand cuff Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Left-handers Ken Brett and Jim Rooker have passed their tests, and the Pittsburgh Pirates may be off and running in National League baseball.

The 5-foot-11 Brett, who hadn't piched in a game since March 25, proved his fitness Sunday by stopping the St. Louis Cardinals on four hits through six innings and watching reliever Dave Giusti mop up.

Brett's form in a 5-0 Pirates victory followed a route-going winning performance a night earlier by Rooker and left Manager Danny Murtaugh in a euphoric mood.

"I said before that if our pitchers recover from their injuries we've got a heck of a chance to have a good staff," Murtaugh noted optimistically.

"I was pleasantly surprised by what Brett did," Murtaugh added. "I like his control from the point that he had good stuff and was the ball over the plate."

Brett, who underwent surgery during the off-season to remove bone chips from his elbow, had been idle for nearly a month after popping a muscle in throwing arm during spring training.

"I'd been throwing live batting practice," the 26-year-old pitcher sad, "but it's a different situation than throwing in a game.

"I knew I'd feel good physically," he added. "It was just a question of whether I'd go out there and get ahead of the batters. It turned out better than I'd expected."

A four-run Pirates second inning, abetted by losing pitcher John Denny's costly error, nelped keep the pressure off Brett, who faced only 23 batters and was aided by a double play.

Richie Zisk ignited the burst with a double off the wall, and Denny's error on Brett's grounder to the mound came between two singles and Richie Hebner's two-run triple.

"Those guys," lamented the 22-year-old Denny, 2-1. "You pitch them the way the books says and they hit a ground ball the other way and it goes through for a hit."

"They have size and they hit the ball," Cards Manager Red Schoendienst noted of the Pirates, however. "When they go in the hole that's part of the game."

Before departing as planned, Brett capped his season's bow with a towering home run, his 10th in the majors and a shot off reliever Mike Garman that opened the seventh inning.

"I choked up on the bat a couple of inches," the stocky pitcher explained. "When I hit the ball it just went farther than expected."

Leaving the Cards' Schoendienst in a sour frame of mind was a production by his team of only an unearned run in 18 innings against Rooker, Brett and Giusti.

"We're going to have to start hitting left-handers," Schoendienst insisted. "We've got some guys right now who are a little flat. We're just going to have to get them out of it."

Miss Palmer wins $200,000

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Palmer. That's about all there is to say about the 1975 $200,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle Golf Tournament.

She almost made the world's most expensive women's golf tournament a bore. Then she added a dash of excitement at the end as she won the event she had led from start to finish.

Coolly composed through chilly winds and then warm desert breezes, the miniscule Ft. Worth, Tex., native ran off three consecutive two-under-par 70s then finally slipped up a bit when she bogeyed the last hole for a 73 Sunday but still finished with a five-under-par 283, one stroke in front of Kat McMullen.

"I really got sort of tired," the 5-foot-1 Miss Palmer said afterwards, slumping in a chair. "And anytime you get tired ygu make mental mistakes like I made." She made three bogies on the final round, one more than she had in the three earlier rounds combined.

"I'm just glad it came at the end," she added.

Miss Palmer's three earlier rounds on the 6,347-yard Mission Hills course, a par-72, kept her ahead by at least a stroke from the outset and she took a three-stroke lead over Miss McMullen into the final 18 holes after her challenger charged in with 66 Saturday.

"I really felt ths pressure out there and I had to hit every shot in my bag because McMullen was playing so well," she said. "I think I played better than I know how. When you're leading you know they're coming at you and it's a miserable feeling."

Miss Palmer held a three-stroke lead over Miss McMullen, her closest pursuer, going into the final nine holes.

But the sturdy blonde from Florida, still seeking her first victory on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, birdied the 11th and 12th holes and quickly pulled to within a stroke of the lead. Miss Palmer, in the threesome behind her competitor, took a stroke back when she birdied the 12th herself and Miss McMullen fell to the pressure when she doubled bogies the 14th hole.

Miss Palmer collected $32,000 for the victory and $3,000 more for leading three rounds. Miss McMullen won $21,000 for second, more than she has ever amassed in any one of her five years as a pro.

Carol Mann, Chako Higuchi of Japan and Carole Jo Skala tied for third, four strokes off the pace at one-under-par 287, each winning $10,500, and a half-dozen including early challenger Jocelyne Bourassa and Jane Blalock were tied for sixth at one over par. The spunky Miss Bourassa, a favorite of the crowds, fell out of contention when she bogeyed three straight hopes on the back nine Sunday.

Sue Roberts, a two-time winner on the tour last year who captured the Bing Crosby International in Mexico last month, and veteran Marlene Hagge, on the tour for 25 years, each won $5,000 for sinking a hole-in-one during the tournament.

The tournament matches only golfers who have top three finishes on the LPGA tour.

Charleston family honored

CHARLESTON - Mrs. Herbert Marshall and children have been selected as Missouri's most outstanding vocal musical family in a contest sponsored by the Missouri Federated Music Clubs.

Presentation of the award was made during the 57th annual state convention of Federated Music Clubs April 2-4 in Columbia.

The Dana Mengel family of Kansas City received the honor as the oustanding family of instrumentalists.

The Marshall family was submitted for this honor by the Katherine Boone Music Club of Charleston. The contest was statewide for families, professional or nonprofessional, vocal or instrumental and a minimum number of three in a family.

Mrs. Marshall studied under the late Katherine Boone for six years before receiving advanced study under scholarships at Central Methodist College at Fayette, Memphis State University at Memphis, Tenn., University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, Ark., Southeast Missouri University at Cape Girardeau and University of California at Los Angeles.

The Marshall family is composed of Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Mary Catherine Frazier, first soprano, a teacher in the Charleston public schools; Alfred Marshall, bass, a student at Southeast Missouri State University; and the younger trio, Edward, Iona and Melanie Marshall of the home.

The group entertains with programs ranging from classical to Broadway show music and they also perform in categories of solo, duet, trio and ensemble.

Representatives of both honored families entertained at the banquet. Mrs. Marshall sang and Danel Mengel, 14, violinst, performed.

The Marshall family will entertain at the NFMC Seventh District spring music convention scheduled May 3 in Sikeston.

Dr. Lamb

Teenager's problem doesn't seem great

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please discuss in your column albumin in the urine? I am somewhat puzzled as to the significance of it in an apparently normal, healthy child of 13.

Also, I believe it has not been present in her urine until recent months. A kidney infection about two years ago did not reveal the presence of albumin. It was discovered about six months ago during a routine examination. Her urine has been checked at intervals since then and usually there is albumin, though occasionally there is none. It varies from a trace to four plus.

Examinations by a diagnostician revealed no symptoms of disease. He did chest X rays and blood tests only. He recommended continuing the urine check for six weeks. In the past month the results were either negative, a trace or one plus each time.

Would you recommend further tests, seeing a urologist or waiting and watching longer?

DEAR READER — I am reluctant to recommend too much testing of a 13-year-old girl who appears to be in good health other than the finding of albumin in the urine. If she had important kidney disease I would expect to find other changes in the urine that you don't mention.

The kidney normally leaks some albumin out of the circulating blood as it is filtered by the kidneys. This may cause a trace of albumin in the urine or an occasional positive test.

When disease affects the kidney filtering mechanism then the amount that is leaked increases. It is certainly a sign that warrants a second look and careful follow up to be sure there is no important kidney disease present.

Some people, particularly when they are young, tend to lose albumin into the urine when they stand upright. The exact reasons are not clear. This is called orthostatic albuminuria, meaning albumin in the urine when you stand upright. This is not a disease or an indication of abnormal kidneys.

Any infection in the urinary tract can cause albumin in the urine, but such an infection is usually accompanied with other findings, such as white cells or red cells in the urine. And, an infection usually is accompanied with symptoms.

The small amount of albumin in your daughter's urine on recent tests sounds like the problem is taking care of itself. If it persists then the doctor may want to measure just how much is really lost in a 24-hour specimen. He could also test the urine while she remains lying down in bed and again while standing to see if the upright position does have anything to do with her case.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What can happen to a man who drinks beer every hour of the day from morning 'til night?

DEAR READER — Liver disease, brain disease with personality changes, heart disease, general deterioration and alcoholism. Such a person needs help. Get him to see his doctor. And if he won't, try to get some advice and help from your local Alcoholics Anonymous organization. They often are very helpful and are used to dealing with people who are reluctant to seek help.

Alcoholism is a serious problem and is a major cause of illness and premature death in our society, not to mention loss of jobs and broken homes. Individuals who persist in using large amounts of alcohol regularly usually lose their ability to learn.

Area jobless benefits total $423,000

JEFFERSON CITY - More than $423,000 in state and federal unemployment benefits were issued during March in the four-county area of Mississippi, New Madrid, Scott and Stoddard counties, Murl Nash, information supervisor of the Missouri Division of Employment Security, as announced.

This compares to $138,150 issued during the same period in 1974. The reason for the increase, Nash said, is that recently enacted federal legislation has increased the number of programs under which unemployed persons can claim unemployment benefits and which are included in the total.

In the four-county area during March, Stoddard County issued the most benefits with a total of $140,381. Of this total, $104,539 was state funded.

The federal government issued benefits through three programs: the extended benefits program (EB), for those whose regular benefits have run out; special unemployment assistance (SUA), which is a program effective only in 1975; and the supplemental benefits program (SBF).

In Stoddard County, $8,597 was issued through the EB program, $27,245 through SUA and none through FSB.

Scott County issued the second highest total of benefits during March, with $97,085. Of this total, $81,543 came from the state and $8,037 through EB, $7,505 through SUA and none through FSB.

Mississippi County received a total of $90,529 in benefits. The state supplied $69,689 of this and the federal government supplied $3,758 through EB, $16,881 through SUA and $201 through FSB.

Of New Madrid County's $95,277 total, the state supplied $35,771 and the federal government supplied $5,064 through EB, $54,308 through SUA and $134 through FSB.

What's the law?

The case of the x-rated films

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Morris operated a Drive-In Motion Picture Theatre where he frequently showed "X" - rated skin flicks. And, being an astute businessman, he did so because if the clothes didn't drop off, he observed that his attendance did.

Unfortunately for Morris, town officials took a dim view of such reel life offerings. And they enacted an ordinance that required the payment of a $500 fee each time a theater owner exhibited an "X"- rated film.

"I won't pay it," protested Morris. "it's highway robbery. If I had to pay out that kind of money every time I showed an 'X' film, I'd be bankrupt in no time."

"That's too bad," responded the town officials, but, under state law, we have the right to regulate and license open-air theaters and to fix fees relating to them.Consequently, you've got to ponyup the 'do-re-mi' if you want to show 'X'-films."

Outraged, Morris took the matter to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Morris pay the $500 to show X-rated films?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the power to regulate does not embrace the power to prohibit in the guise of a confiscatory fee. And, in this case, concluded the judge in effect, the motive of the town officials was not to regulate open-air motion-picture theaters, but rather, to force Morris to stop showing 'X'-rated films.
